

ABOUT

SOPHIA FEHRENBACKER

Sophia is an Idaho State University student who is working towards her B.A. in Anthropology with a certificate in Forensic Science. Though she is not a “natural native” of Idaho, she considers Idaho to be her home. She enjoys spending time outdoors, experimental baking, car karaoke, and much more! Sophia finds joy in helping others. She loves a challenge and finding solutions to problems. This, along with her heritage, sparked interest in working as an intern for the Coroner of Bingham County. Sophia is of Polynesian and Native American decent. One day during a college lecture, the topic of missing and murdered minority cases was discussed. In that moment, she realized that there is a need for individuals who are passionate and willing to seek justice for Missing and Murdered Indigenous People (MMIP). Ever since that day, she has felt compelled to follow this line of work. Sophia plans to continue her education and specialize in Forensic Genealogy. She hopes to provide support, peace, and justice to families and individuals who are affected by the death of a loved one. Sophia is excited for this opportunity to be working alongside Bingham County, and looks forward to what the future holds.
